RALPH C. WILSON, JR.
President

The president and sole owner of the Buffalo Bills is Ralph C. Wilson, Jr., a young Detroit insurance and trucking executive.

A rabid professional football fan from childhood, Wilson had always wanted to own a franchise. He made every effort to acquire a NFL franchise, either by expansion of the league or through purchase of an existing franchise. But, as Wilson puts it... "nothing was ever available."

Wilson did, however, manage to become a stockholder in the Detroit Lions. That merely served to further his appetite for pro football which is, he insists, "the most exciting spectator sport the world has ever seen."

When the American Football League came into being in the late summer of 1959, Wilson made an immediate bid to acquire a franchise. Within two days, he obtained a franchise in the infant professional circuit. Within a few weeks, he located it in Buffalo.

One of the most important influences in Wilson's decision for Buffalo was a local building contractor, George Schaaf. Schaaf had been Wilson's commanding officer aboard a naval minesweeper during World War II. As a native of Western New York and an ardent fan, Schaaf recalled the days of the All-American Conference Bills, the tremendous fan support the club had enjoyed, and the great loss to the city when the AAC died and the Bills were not among the teams absorbed into the National Football League.

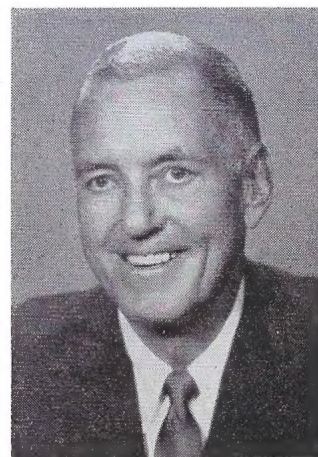

Wilson questioned Schaaf closely on the present temper of the City of Buffalo regarding pro football because... "11 years is a long time and I knew Buffalo had had many disappointments through promises from the NFL that had never materialized."

"But George and many other of Buffalo's most prominent citizens convinced me that the city was one of the greatest sports towns in America."

Wilson was graduated from the University of Virginia and subsequently attended the University of Michigan Law school before enlisting in the Navy. He earned his commission within a year and saw service in both the Atlantic and Pacific Theaters.

A modest and completely unassuming man, Wilson has always been reluctant to discuss his war experience. However, a national magazine once wrote him up as one of America's most distinguished heroes.

Wilson joined his father in the insurance business after the war. As he began to attain personal success, he branched out. Today Wilson's interests include insurance, trucking, road building, oil drilling, horse racing... and last, but far from least, ownership of the Buffalo Bills in the American Football League.

PATRICK J. MCGRODER
Vice President - Director

During the decade prior to the 1960 formation of the American Football League, Patrick J. (Pat) McGroder was a spearheading force behind the ceaseless efforts of the City of Buffalo to obtain a major league professional football franchise.

McGroder, the man with a million friends, labored night and day, both in official capacities of city government — ranging from Chairman of the Stadium and Auditorium Board (1954-58) through Commissioner of Parks (1958), to Sports and Redevelopment Coordinator (1959-61) — and unofficially as just about the most enthusiastic sports booster Buffalo has ever had.

Then Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. was granted an AFL franchise and began giving serious consideration to locating it in Buffalo. McGroder, as Sports and Redevelopment Coordinator, negotiated the necessary stadium arrangements for the city with Wilson. The contracts were signed with a minimum of negotiation and delay and McGroder admits— "It was a very happy day for me. Pro football was finally back home after a long time away." McGroder's ceaseless efforts since 1949 to bring pro football back to Buffalo were partially responsible for his selection as "Sportsman of the Year" in 1951, and as one of Buffalo's ten "Outstanding Citizens" in 1958. Equally important in relation to the latter award, was the fact that McGroder fathered the highly successful "Mothers' March on Polio".

The firm friendship between Wilson and McGroder developed during their first meeting. It was nurtured by firm convictions, on the parts of both men, that Buffalo "is the finest pro football city in the country." That friendship ultimately resulted in the election of McGroder, in December 1961, to a vice-presidency in the Buffalo Bills' organization as well as membership on the board of directors.

The Bills do not represent McGroder's only connection with professional sports. He is also a member of the board of directors of the Buffalo Hockey Club. He formerly served on the board of the Buffalo Baseball Club.

McGroder is a former vice president of the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club and a former member of the board of directors of the Automobile Club of Buffalo. He was president of the Police Athletic League during the first six years of its existence. He also served as a member of the D'Youville College Board of Governors.

GENERAL MANAGER

Long before Ralph Wilson placed his American Football League franchise in the City of Buffalo, New York . . . or even before he had a franchise to place anywhere . . . he knew who he wanted to be his general manager, if and when. That man was Dick Gallagher.

Wilson, as everybody else, was aware of the Cleveland Browns success story. But, in contrast to most people, Wilson realized that a single man "does not an organization make," and that Paul Brown had expert help at Cleveland. Much of that help was supplied by Gallagher, whose titles were director of player personnel and assistant coach, but whose duties encompassed much additional front office and public relations responsibility. Gallagher was often . . . and aptly . . . described as Paul Brown's first lieutenant.

Gallagher, a native of Ironton, Ohio, served two tenures with the Browns. Dick originally joined Paul Brown as end coach in 1947, the second year of the defunct All-American Conference. The next three years the Browns produced one of the best teams in the history of pro football. Gallagher, himself, insists the 1948 Cleveland Browns team was the "greatest I have ever seen."

When the A.A.C. died after the 1949 season, Gallagher returned to college coaching. Dick, who earlier had been an assistant coach of football and head basketball coach at William and Mary, took over the football reigns at Santa Clara. He coached the nationally ranked Broncos through 1953 when the school dropped football.

In 1954, Dick again joined the pros, becoming a member of the Chicago Cardinals coaching staff. A year later, Paul Brown called him "back home" as assistant coach and director of player personnel.

For four years thereafter, Gallagher signed the most promising collegiate talent available to the Browns. Jimmy Brown, Bobby Mitchell, Preston Carpenter, Milt Plum are a few of Gallagher's signees.

In addition to his other duties, the personable Irishman flashed his friendly smile, ready wit, and his countless football stories along the Ohio banquet trail during the off-season. He was Browns' No. 1 ambassador of good-will, just as he has been the Bills' since the day he signed on as general manager. From February 1, 1960 until the present, Gallagher has been the guest speaker at over 300 sports gatherings, numbering in size from 10 to 750 people.

BILLS' HEAD COACH
LOU SABAN

A student of the Chinese language (Mandarin dialect) and head coach of a professional football club would ordinarily make strange bed fellows . . . if they are two people. If one person is both . . . and Lou Saban decidedly is . . . the incongruity is even more obvious and demands a reasonable explanation.

"Football came naturally and, I guess chronologically," according to the headman of the Buffalo Bills. "Any fluency I have — or did have in Chinese — was born of World War II and the demand for Chinese language interpreters in the C.B.I. (China-Burma-India Theater). They sure didn't teach Chinese back home."

Back home is Brookfield, Illinois, where Saban was born October 13, 1921. Located in the heart of the Mid-West high school football belt, Brookfield considered the fortunes of its high school football team to be of considerable importance — equivalent, approximately, to the desirability of balancing the village budget.

Lou's three brothers, Mike, Joe and John, either preceded or followed his footsteps as an outstanding Brookfield High School star. Thus the Sabans, over a long period, had much to do with establishing Brookfield's reputation as a top Illinois high school football citadel. Mike ultimately played for Indiana; Joe for Illinois, while John performed for Xavier.

Following graduation from high school in 1940, Lou entered the University of Indiana at Bloomington where he came under the tutelage of the famed "Bo" McMillin. At Indiana, Saban starred during two varsity years as a single wing quarterback. The resemblance — for the benefit of the uninitiated — to the currently popular T-type quarterback is slight. Single wing quarterbacks are essentially blocking backs. T-quarterbacks have never been renowned for their ability to "cream" their fellow men. Matter of fact, most coaches are even somewhat less than enthusiastic over the prospect their quarterbacks might block targets of opportunity.

Saban was the Hoosiers' captain and most valuable player in 1942, as well as an All-Big Ten selection. All-America honors probably would have awaited Lou as a senior in 1943, but the military got there first — with aforementioned Oriental overtones.

In due course of events, Saban was commissioned a 1st Lieutenant in the O.S.S. (Office of Strategic Services). "I wasn't a cloak and dagger agent," points out Saban. "I was assigned to language school at Fort Benning, Georgia. When I had completed the course, I was ordered to the C.B.I."

The C.B.I. was perhaps the least glamorous of the major theaters of war. It provided the backdrop for the Hump, General Joseph "Vinegar Joe" Stillwell and Merrill's Marauders. But the war there — all in all — was wet, dirty, jungle ridden, terribly costly in men and materials with territorial successes measured in feet and inches instead of miles — and vastly underpublicized.

Saban spent 3½ years in service. During his military tenure, the All-America Conference was taking shape on paper as a post-war rival to the National League.

Even before Lou's honorable discharge in early 1946, he had been signed by the Cleveland Browns, of the new circuit. Thus Saban was in at the start of one of sports most fabulous success sagas.

During the four-year life of the A.A.C., the Browns won four league championships. Saban captained the Browns during all campaigns. Twice, in 1948 and 1949 when Lou was an All-League line-backing selection, it is generally conceded the Browns were the best football club in the history of the sport.

At the conclusion of the 1949 season the A.A.C. folded as an entity through a merger with the NFL and Saban retired as a player. The timing of the merger and Lou's retirement was coincidental. There was no connection.

"It was merely," recalls Lou, "time for me to get out as a player and get started on the coaching career which had always been my ultimate goal in football."

Upon retirement, Saban was tapped for the head coach's job by Case Institute of Technology. Lou took over in 1950 and mentored the Roughriders through 1952. During that period, Saban continued active in pro football as an authoritative halftime commentator for the Browns—now in the process of winning NFL divisional and league titles—regional TV network.

In 1952 and 1953, Lou was an assistant coach on the staff of the University of Washington Huskies. He came back to the Big Ten in 1954 as an assistant at Northwestern. In 1955, Saban became the Wildcat's headman.

Saban forsook coaching the following year to establish himself in insurance—a business to which he continues to devote time and effort during the off-season. Lou admits giving considerable thought to the prospect of divorcing himself entirely from football and concentrating exclusively on a business career during 1956. But the lure of the sport proved too strong.

In 1957, Saban returned to the game as head coach of Western Illinois. He won conference championships in 1958 and 1959. The latter year, Lou's Leathernecks were undefeated and ranked second in small college nation. It was at Western Illinois that Lou coached Larry Garron, now the Boston Patriots' outstanding running star, to Little All-America fame.

With the formation of the American Football League, Saban returned to pro football as coach of the Boston Patriots. The Patriots were among the last clubs to be organized. Despite the late start, Saban fielded a tough early season club that won four of five pre-season games and established pro football on a solid foundation in Boston. A succession of injuries cut the Patriots down later in the season but they remained a colorful, high-scoring crew that was exciting to watch and invariably in contention.

Saban directed the Pats through the first four games of the 1961 season before switching to the Bills as director of player personnel. Lou's hiring by Owner Ralph C. Wilson, Jr., was predicted by Wilson's desire to "have Lou on our side since he gave us so much trouble from the other side of the field."

Saban's work as director of player personnel was in large measure responsible for the fine draft the Bills again enjoyed in 1961. Buffalo signed 14 of its first 21 choices, plus an excellent crop of free agents.

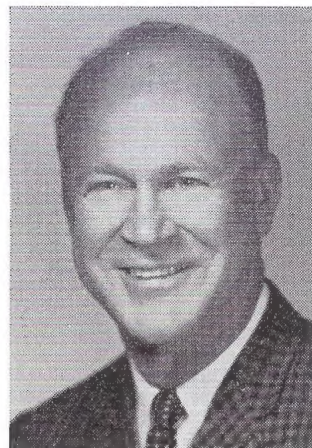

When Wilson decided on a coaching change for the Bills after the 1961 season, Saban's was the first name mentioned and the only one seriously considered. Lou replaced Buster Ramsey, officially, on January 18, 1962.

Married in 1947 at the height of his playing career with the Cleveland Browns, Lou and his wife Lorraine have four children . . . Tom, 11; Barbara, 8; Patricia, 5; and Christine, 3.

In his spare time, Saban does a little generalized cooking and "do it yourselfing" around the house. "I also read anything I can get my hands on," says Lou. "Reading helps me relax."

For additional relaxation, Saban performs musically on the bass-guitar, although, as Lou puts it, "there is a definite lack of proficiency in my playing."

Be that as it may, there is no lack of proficiency in Saban's coaching. He's a learned and dedicated football coach with the added ability to develop overlooked talent into polished professionals.

HERMAN BALL
Offensive Line Coach

A total of 19 years' experience in professional football preceded Herman Ball's hiring as offensive line coach of the Buffalo Bills February 8, 1963.

Born May 9, 1910 in Kingsville, Tennessee, Ball got into pro football as an area scout for the Washington Redskins in 1944 and 1945. At the same time, he served the University of Maryland as an assistant coach under Clarence (Doc) Spears and Bear Bryant.

In 1946, the soft-spoken Ball became a full time pro. He accepted an appointment as an assistant coach of the Redskins under Turk Edwards. Three and a half seasons later, Ball took over as head coach of the Redskins, replacing Edwards midway through the 1949 season.

Ball continued as head man of the Redskins through the 1950 NFL campaign and into 1951. Then, as it must happen to all coaches whose clubs fail to show winning records, Herman got fired.

The firing was in no way an adverse reflection on Ball's ability. Dick Todd, who replaced Herman, promptly rehired him as his chief assistant. Ironically, Todd had been an assistant under Ball.

Ball remained at Washington through the 1954 season. In 1955, he moved to Pittsburgh as an assistant coach. A year later, Weeb Ewbank, now head coach and general manager of the New York Jets, hired Herman to coach the Baltimore Colts' offensive line. It was the start of a lengthy and most pleasant association that was to last through seven seasons and two NFL championships.

The Colts won league championships in both 1958 and 1959. Members of the 1958 team—thrilling victors over the New York Giants in the first and only overtime game in NFL championship history—tagged Ball with the nickname—"Mr. Herman". The "sobriquet" was attached the quiet veteran coach out of great respect for his ability and accomplishment with the Baltimore offensive line. And, make no mistake, the Colts forward wall during those halcyon years, anchored by the incomparable Big Jim Parker, provided the catalyst for the passing of Unitas; the receiving of Berry, Mutcheller and Moore; the running of Ameche and the rest of the fleet Colt backs.

Although "Mr. Herman" was responsible in large part for the individual success of a dozen or more outstanding Baltimore interior linemen over the years, the development of the aforementioned Parker into pro football's finest offensive tackle was undoubtedly his grandest achievement. "Certainly," Herman Ball agrees, "I can think of no other individual player who was any more coachable, or of whom I am any more proud. He did everything we ever asked of him." And that's just as far as Herman Ball's inborn modesty will allow him to go.

Ball gravitated directly into the coaching profession upon being graduated from Davis-Elkins College in 1935, where he had been a three-year varsity guard.

Ridgely High School in West Virginia was Herman's first coaching port-of-call. In 1936, Ball moved on to Allegany High School in Cumberland, Maryland. During 7 seasons, his clubs ran up an imposing over-all record of 49-13-1.

Then came a move to Maryland to join the staff of "Doc" Spears in 1943. Three years Herman became a full time pro coach and the sport became the richer for it.

Herman Ball's complete dedication to pro football hasn't left a lot of time for much else in the way of hobbies and avocations the past two decades. "I like to cook", admits "Mr. Herman", "standard dishes only, especially out of doors using a charcoal grill. And one time, I got around to building a club room in my former home in Baltimore. I'm proud of it because it had everything including a powder room for the ladies."

"And when things got overly hectic on the football field, I sometimes relax by playing "at" an electric organ. It eases the stresses and strains and, I guess, it helps me to become a little more bearable around the house."

Herman and his wife, Edna, live in North Tonawanda, New York.

JOHN MAZUR
Receiver Coach

The youngest member of the Buffalo Bills' coaching staff is John Mazur.

Be that as it may, the 6'2", 210-pound former Notre Dame quarterback is considered one of the game's most astute coaches. Saban, in announcing Mazur's appointment as offensive backfield and receiver coach, said, "John is a real student of the complexities of the game, and equally important, he can teach what he knows."

Saban paused, grinned and then continued, "And whatever John is unable to get across verbally, he's still young enough to demonstrate through practical application."

The 31-year old Mazur was born and raised in Plymouth, Pennsylvania, June 17, 1932, which is close to Wilkes-Barre, a hot-bed of Pennsylvania high school football.

College talent scouts annually descend on Pennsylvania in numbers roughly equal to locusts in a plague year. This is by design rather than accident since high school football as played in the Keystone State is considered of a brand and variety superior to that played throughout most of the rest of the nation. Personnel wise, Pennsylvania supplies more budding talent to major football colleges than any other state with the possible exception of Ohio.

As a result of this, plus Mazur's great reputation earned at high school as an All-State quarterback, some forty colleges and universities actively sought his enrollment.

Mazur chose Notre Dame. Neither he nor the University ever had reason to be sorry. Entering as a freshman in 1948, John played outstanding football over the next four years (1 freshman, 3 varsity) in behalf of the Fighting Irish.

As a sophomore, John was a member of the 1949 National Championship team coached by the incomparable Frank Leahy. It was considered unusual, in those halcyon days of Notre Dame football glory, that a sophomore quarterback should make even the traveling roster not to mention that he should play an amount of time sufficient to earn a letter. Mazur did both. He also lettered in 1950 and 1951, gaining All-Midwest and All-America recognition his senior year.

After graduation — with a Bachelor of Science degree in physical education — Mazur was commissioned a lieutenant in the United States Marines. He served two years at Quantico and Camp Pendleton.

It was during his service stint that Mazur received his baptism to football as played by the pros. He quarterbacked the Marines in the 1953 All-Star game for Navy Relief against the Los Angeles Rams.

Mazur was honorably discharged in 1954 in time to join the Vancouver Lions of the Western Canada Inter-Provincial Professional League, which club had outbid the NFL's Dallas Cowboys for his services. John's playing career, as a pro, was brief and injury ridden. A succession of leg hurts necessitated his retirement after a single starring year.

Annis Stukas, then coach at Vancouver, noted sadly when John decided to "hang 'em up." "I hate to see Mazur retire. He would have been one of the outstanding quarterbacks in the history of Canadian football."

Canadian pro football's loss immediately became American college football's gain. Mazur accepted a position as backfield assistant at Tulane University under Andy Pilney. After three years, Mazur severed a most pleasant relationship with the New Orleans school to accept a similar position at Marquette. In 1959, Big John joined the staff of Boston University under Steve Sinko. There he remained, until Saban — long an admirer of Mazur's coaching abilities, and in a position at the time, as coach of the Boston Patriots, to judge those abilities first hand, issued an invitation to join the Bills' staff.

During Mazur's comparatively brief college coaching career, he developed some outstanding players who are presently making their mark in pro ball. Among the more notable names are: Ed Khayat, star defensive tackle of the Philadelphia Eagles, who Mazur mentored at Tulane, Marquette's Pete Hall and Frank Mestnick, of the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals respectively, and Dave Viti, B.U.'s great 1961 end, who was the Bills' sixth draft choice.

Mazur was married in 1958. He and his wife, Bernadine, are the parents of a daughter.

JERRY SMITH
Defensive Line Coach

Aside from Head Coach Lou Saban, the only member of the Buffalo Bills' coaching staff with extensive pro experience as a player is Jerome "Jerry" Smith—33-year old native of Dayton, Ohio.

The strapping 228-pound Smith—who will have responsibility for the Bills' defensive line—played a total of three professional years with the San Francisco 49'ers and the Green Bay Packers.

Following three starring intercollegiate seasons at the University of Wisconsin where he earned All-Big Ten and All Mid-West honors at tackle and was graduated with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Physical Education, Smith was drafted by the 49'ers in 1952.

Jerry got in two seasons before commencing a two-year service hitch. Commissioned a 1st Lieutenant in the U. S. Army Transportation Corps, Smith served as platoon officer in Germany. He also was assigned to Fort Eustis, Virginia as assistant coach of the camp football team.

This latter, service-connected experience, influenced Smith's ultimate choice of post player careers.

"I enjoyed coaching very much," said Jerry. "I decided then and there to go into the profession full time when my playing days were over." During his two years with San Francisco, Smith had worked during the off season as an account executive for a national brokerage firm. It, too, had been a pleasant and rewarding job and Smith was giving serious consideration to the possibilities of the "grey flannel" life on a full time basis prior to his assignment as assistant coach at Fort Eustis.

Discharged from service in 1956, Smith joined the Green Bay Packers — via trade. Whereas, he had been an offensive guard with the 49'ers, Coach Lisle Blackburn converted Jerry to defensive end with the Packers.

"The Packers of 1956, were not the Packers of today," ruefully recalls Smith. "We didn't win too many games."

After the 1956 season, Smith retired as a player. He rejoined the brokerage firm while awaiting "the right opportunity."

It was forthcoming in 1959. Smith took over as line coach of Dayton University's Flyers. He stayed one season. During his brief tenure, he was instrumental in the development of Bob DeMarco, currently an outstanding pro lineman with the St. Louis Cardinals.

In 1960, the AFL came into being. Lou Saban needed a defensive line coach at Boston. He called. Smith heard. The two joined forces and are now together again with the Buffalo Bills.

Smith maintains his approximate playing weight and condition with plenty of sports activity and exercise the year round. Jerry is an avid golfer, bowler and swimmer. He also continues active in the more strenuous sports of basketball and handball.

Unlike most pro coaches who are not enamoured of drawing an assignment as leader of training camp exercises, Smith fights for the job of director of calisthenics. This daily period of torture (players' term) is designed to whip muscles into competitive hardness and remove excess suet.

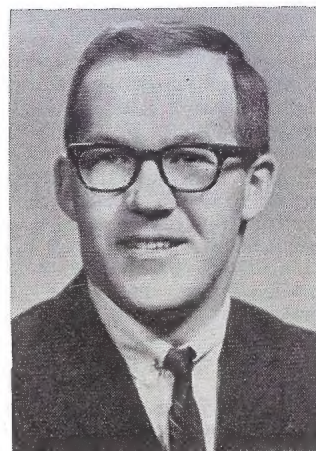

Jerry Smith is an admitted expert in this phase of conditioning. "My exercises are classics. But they do the job. And no one dares squawk too much, because I participate as I lead."

Jerry and his wife Shirley were married in 1959. They are the proud parents of three children.

JOEL COLLIER
Defensive Backfield Coach

Joel Collier, assistant coach of the Buffalo Bills with responsibility for the defensive secondary, could easily be mistaken for a college professor of Romantic Literature, a research physicist, a concert master in a major symphony orchestra. In fact, an initial meeting would undoubtedly leave the other party with the distinct impression that Collier is anything but what he actually is — a dedicated pro football coach with an All-America intercollegiate playing background.

Horn-rimmed glasses enhance a normally intense and studious facial expression. Perhaps the adjective studious contains the key. For Collier represents the newer breed of professional football coach. This type trains for a pro coaching career from childhood. The profession is not entered into through a belated decision made during or after a successful playing career.

"I can't remember," says the soft spoken Collier, "when I didn't plan on a coaching career. As a child, I devoured everything of a technical football nature I could get my hands on."

Collier's childhood was spent in Rock Island, Illinois, where he was born June 7, 1932. A typical (every spare minute in the fall) pre-teen sandlot football career was followed by high school playing stardom. Unlike nearly all high school players who are content to learn one assignment (their own) and a single phase of the game, Collier studied each position and assimilated an all-around knowledge of the game's intricacies. Joel's Rock Island High School Coach Shorty Almquist was as quick to spot Collier's coaching potential as he was his undeniable playing ability. "Coach Almquist," says Joel, "did everything to nurture my ambitions to be a coach as well as to develop me as a player."

First things first, of course. Thus it was as an All-State end Collier entered Northwestern University in 1950. Joel's three-year varsity career was climaxed by his election to the Wildcats' captaincy in 1953. That same year, the 6'2", 200-pounder, was selected All-Big Ten as well as nominated to several All-America teams.

Following his final intercollegiate campaign, Collier played in both the Senior and East-West Shrine Bowl All-Star games. Thereafter, he was drafted by the professional New York Giants. However, Collier notified Giants, to their dismay, that he intended to forego professional football in order to accept a graduate assistantship at Western Illinois University that would enable him to study toward his Masters Degree in Education, as well as to work as an assistant varsity football coach.

The start of Collier's coaching career was delayed, however, by a call to service. He served in the Marshall Islands with the United States Army during the years 1954-56.

Collier finally got to Western Illinois in 1957, just in time to join Lou Saban who was then making his debut as head coach of the "Leathernecks." Thus began professional a relationship that has continued for five years with but short interruption.

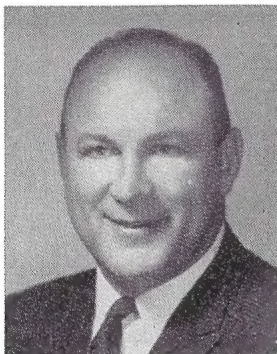

In 1958, with Collier now a full-fledged, salaried member of the Western Illinois coaching staff, the "Leathernecks" won a conference championship. In 1959, Western Illinois went undefeated and was ranked second in the nation among small colleges.

Collier joined Saban's Boston Patriots' coaching staff in 1960, upon formation of the American Football League, as defensive backfield assistant.

When Lou became head coach of the Buffalo Bills in January 1962, Collier was quick to heed a call to rejoin his friend and chief. Collier's appointment to the Bills' coaching staff was officially announced by Saban and owner Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. less than a week after Saban, himself, had been hired.

Collier and his wife, Shirley, reside with their two daughters in Tonawanda, New York.

Joel's dedication to football leaves little time for hobbies. "About the closest he comes to having a hobby other than his work," says Shirley Collier, "is a nightly session with his filing cabinets." She explained Collier has eight filing cabinets chockfull of technical, clinical and personnel football information — all of it completely categorized. Keeping it current and in proper order is a hobby in itself.

HARVEY JOHNSON

Director of Player Personnel

The director of player personnel of the Buffalo Bills is Harvey Johnson. Johnson was an All-Southern Conference fullback selection at William and Mary.

Additionally, Harvey was an excellent place-kicker. His powerful and accurate foot was the difference in seven ball games during his college career.

During World War II Johnson served in the United States Navy. One of his duty tours was at Bainbridge where he played football with the powerful Bainbridge Naval Air eleven.

The New York Yankees of the All-American Conference drafted Johnson to their roster when the war had ended. During the next four years, Harvey was an outstanding defensive back for the perennially powerful New Yorkers. Of even greater importance to the team's cause was Johnson's educated toe.

Groza was great in behalf of the Cleveland Browns during that period. However, it was Harvey Johnson who established an AAC record of 46 consecutive points after touchdown during the four year span of the AAC. Ironically, Harvey missed his initial try in 1946 in the Yanks first conference game. His next miss was in the team's final game in 1949 — the last year the conference existed as an entity.

Johnson finished his playing career in the National Football League. In 1953, Harvey retired to the coaching ranks.

His first job was with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Big Four League as an assistant to Carl Voyles. After one year, Johnson was appointed head coach of the Kitchener team of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

He built a record of perfection on that job which will be extremely difficult to improve upon. He bossed the "Dutchmen" for four years. They won four O.R.F.U. Championships.

Harvey bought a "little piece of land" just outside Kitchener in 1955 and commenced to combine football coaching with the raising of thoroughbred horses. You see, he figured the Kitchener job was likely, on the basis of record alone, to become permanent.

The Montreal Alouettes had different ideas. The Big-Four team hit Harvey with an offer, "I just couldn't turn down." The next two seasons — 1958 and 1959 — found Harvey as a top assistant to Peahead Walker at Montreal.

Meantime, the horsebreeding business was coming along fine. Harvey insists "some of my horses even win races."

Johnson originally joined the Bills as defensive backfield coach in 1960. Harvey, wife, Molly Ann, and their five children reside in Welland, Ontario. But during the season they'll spend a lot of time in Buffalo rooting for the Bills.

MEET THE BILLS

BILL SHAW, Guard — Captain

Birthdate — December 15, 1938
Birthplace — Natchez, Miss.
Hometown — Clinton, Miss.
College — Georgia Tech
Height — 6' 3"
Weight — 249

Captain of the 1963 Bills... Selected 2nd AFL All-Star team... According to Coach Lou Saban, is not yet close to full potential as a pro... Big, fast, strong... Ranks 1-2 among best pulling guards and could be equally effective on defense where he earned great portion of college All-America reputation... One of Bills' fabulous 1961 college draft selections... NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle selected Shaw to his 1960 list, published in National Magazine, of 33 college players most likely to make it big as pros. Played in both 1961 Coaches' All-America Bowl at Buffalo and Chicago All-Star Games... Loves to hunt and fish... Resides with wife Pat and daughter Cindy, 2, in Clinton, Mississippi... Proprietor of Machine Shop.

Height — 6' 1"
Weight — 196

Won regular job at defensive safety the final two games of 1962 season... Tough and talented second year pro who was outstanding defensive back on 1961 national championship University of Alabama team... Has speed and reactions to do a big job this year despite comparative lack of experience as a pro... Bills' biggest defensive back... In college, was considered an excellent punt-return man... Could be used, in a pinch, as offensive halfback by Bills where he showed to distinct advantage last training camp before need to switch to defense became apparent... Resides in Philadelphia during off-season.

STEW BARBER Linebacker

Birthdate — June 14, 1939
Birthplace — Bradford, Pa.
Hometown — Bradford, Pa.
College — Penn State
Height — 6' 2"
Weight — 248

Starting 3rd season with Bills although barely 24 years old... Started as linebacker on defense in 1961 after having been selected number 4 in draft... Shifted to offensive tackle in 1962 and through hard work and desire developed into left side bulwark of offensive line that opened up holes that enabled Bills' running backs to pick up record-shattering 2480 yards rushing... Will play in 1963 at 248 pounds, up 21 from rookie linebacking season... Experts predict brilliant future as pro... Works in Buffalo as sales representative for trucking firm during off-season... Married... Wife's name, Vicki... Daughter Tracey, 1 year.

1962 IN A THIMBLE

SEPTEMBER 9 at BUFFALO
Houston 28; Buffalo 23

A pair of touchdown passes... George Blanda to Charley Hennigan... helped promote the defending AFL champion Houston Oilers to a 28-3 lead early in the 3rd period. The Bills' Art Baker sparked comeback, which fell just short, with 100-yard kickoff return following Henningan's second score. Buffalo scored two more in final period as Warren Rabb hit Elbert Dubenion with a six-yard scoring pass, following an interception by Marv Matuszak, and Rabb sneaked from the one after Carl Taseff had picked off another Blanda pass. Houston held on for a 28-23 victory by controlling the ball for the game's final ten plays.

Denver 23; Buffalo 20

Cookie Gilchrist rolled 42 yards on a draw in the first two minutes; Al Dorow fired short TD strikes to Ernie Warlick and to Cookie and the Bills owned a 20-3 halftime lead. But... Denver rallied with Frank Tripucka throwing for 14 and 64 yards to Bob Scarpitto and Al Frazier respectively, and Gene Mingo booting a pair of field goals to pull out a 23-20 cliff-hanger. Mingo's field goal from the 10-yard line with 31 seconds remaining, won it for the invading Broncos.

New York 17; Buffalo 6

Lee Grosscup completed 17 of 26 passes, including a TD pass to Thurlow Cooper as the New York Titans handed the Bills their third defeat in a row... all at home. Buffalo gained 325 total yards, but managed only a single touchdown... a second quarter Rabb to Dubenion pass. Dick Christy gained 68 yards for the Titans, including a four-yard TD. Shockley aimed a 35-yard field goal effort that was true. Many of the twenty-four thousand fans aimed empty beer cans in abject frustration at game's end. Fortunately, their aims were less true.

SEPTEMBER 30 at DALLAS
Dallas 41; Buffalo 21

Abner Haynes turned the corner for 71 yards with 1:10 gone for Dallas and things got progressively worse for the Bills. Haynes climaxed an ensuing 91-yard, nine-play sequence from the 13. Then Len Dawson hit Chris Burford for 30 and Frank Jackson for 62, while Jackson carried from the 10, for a 34-7 Texans' advantage before Bills rallied to make 4th straight defeat respectable. Gilchrist plunged from the Dallas six; Rabb passed to Glenn Bass for 31 for Buffalo's final two TD's.

OCTOBER 7 at HOUSTON
Houston 17; Buffalo 14

Linebacker Gary Cutsinger picked off Warren Rabb's 3rd down pass on Houston's 21-yard line late in the game. Eight plays later—at 14:30—the Oilers' had an unexpected 17-14 victory, as George Blanda nailed Bill Groman in the end zone from the Bills' three-yard line, and the Bills had an equally unexpected fifth straight defeat. Buffalo's TD's, which built a 14-3 lead in the 4th quarter, were scored by Carl Charon on a 44-yard interception (by Marv Matuszak)—lateral, and by Cookie Gilchrist on a one-yard smash. Charlie Frazier had hauled in a 73-yard pass from Blanda to set the stage for the Oilers' last ditch histrionics.

OCTOBER 13 at BUFFALO
Buffalo 35; San Diego 10

Cookie Gilchrist banged out 125 overland yards and scored twice—a one-yard plunge and a seven-yard pass from Warren Rabb—to pace the Bills to their first victory of the season as 20,074 fans roared approval. Rabb also hit Glenn Bass and Elbert Dubenion with touchdown passes, the former 76 yards, and Wayne Crow plunged for a TD. Crow gained 116 yards rushing, including 49 on a fake kick. Rabb completed 5 out of only 12 for three touchdowns.

OCTOBER 20 at BUFFALO
Buffalo 14; Oakland 6

The rejuvenated Bills made it two in a row with a mud-bath 14-6 victory over Oakland's Raiders. Twenty-one thousand fans sat happily throughout a driving rain storm as Cookie continued his ground-gaining rampage with 143 yards and a 7-yard TD. Rabb sneaked for the Bills' other score while throwing only 11 passes. Bo Roberson ran right end for 14 yards and the Raiders' TD.

OCTOBER 28 at DENVER
Buffalo 45; Denver 38

The Bills got even for past Bronco indignities with three touchdowns in a thrilling "come-from-behind" last-period victory. With Denver leading 38-23 and 11:57 remaining, Warren Rabb took charge. Rabb to Dubenion, 75 yards; Rabb to Bass, 40 yards, plus the quarterbacks two points after touchdown rollout and it was all tied up. After a Denver punt, Rabb flipped to Gilchrist on the sideline and Cookie sped 76 yards to the Bronco 4. Rabb rolled out and in. It was a short ride home that night. Rabb hit on 9 of 16. Gilchrist rambled for 98 yards, scored twice and kicked a 33-yard field goal. Frank Tripucka threw 5 touchdown passes in the losing Denver cause.

NOVEMBER 3 at BUFFALO
Buffalo 28; Boston 28

Thirty-three thousand, two hundred forty-seven fans sat in rain turning to snow as the Bills battled to a furious 28-28 tie with bitter rival Boston. Back-to-back, 100-yard kickoff returns by the Patriots' Larry Garron and Elbert Dubenion highlighted the first half. The Bills scored twice early in the third period on Cookie Gilchrist's seven-yard smash and Leroy Moore's interception of an errant screen pass to assume a 28-14 advantage. Boston battled back to tie it up, as Babe Parilli found the passing range. The Bills' Archie Matsos had the apparent winning touchdown called back when the referee ruled his interception of Parilli's pass came after the whistle.

NOVEMBER 11 at SAN DIEGO
Buffalo 40; San Diego 20

The Bills rang up 37 halftime points on the injury riddled San Diego Chargers and coasted home thereafter in contesting their fifth straight game without defeat. Cookie Gilchrist romped 22 yards and kicked a field goal to get things underway in the first period. Then Wray Carlton, who gained 90 yards overall, took over. The former Duke University star scored on 12 and 14-yard runs, within three minutes. Then Warren Rabb and Elbert Dubenion combined on a 68-yard pass-run and Rabb hit Glenn Bass with a 13-yard scoring heave before the "Chargerettes" took over. Bob Jackson ran for a pair of touchdowns and John Hadl threw for one as San Diego battled valiantly back in the second half.

NOVEMBER 18 at OAKLAND
Buffalo 10; Oakland 6

In chalking up their fifth win in six games—the other was a tie—the Bills' defenses held the pesky Oakland Raiders without a touchdown. It was well they did. Late in the third period, Jack Kemp made his quarterbacking debut. He hit Wayne Crow with a 16-yard pass. It was the Bills' only touchdown and it produced a 10-6 victory. Cookie Gilchrist, who gained 103 yards rushing, also kicked a 21-yard field goal. Ageless Ben Agajanian booted two—49 and 36 yards—for the homestanding Raiders.

NOVEMBER 23 at BOSTON
Boston 21; Buffalo 10

With Wray Carlton sidelined and Cookie Gilchrist seeing only limited action, the Bills finally found defeat after six games without it. Jack Kemp, making his first start for Buffalo, threw 49 yards to Elbert Dubenion early in the game. Then Kemp carried across for a TD. Later, a Kemp-to-Dubenion pass, covering 30 yards into fairly deep Boston territory, was called back. Boston took over, and with Tom Yewcic sparking, gained a "never-to-be-headed" 14-7 halftime lead. The sub quarterback fired touchdown passes of 31 and 69 yards to Jim Colclough and Ron Burton respectively. Mack Yoho's third-period field goal was more than nullified by Yewcic's 19-yard toss to Gino Cappelletti in the fourth. Kemp completed a highly respectable 14 of 22. But Yewcic hit on 12 of 17, including the scorers.

DECEMBER 2 at BUFFALO Buffalo 23; Dallas 14

The largest crowd in Buffalo AFL history, 35,261, could find nothing wrong with the Bills' final home game of the season. The 68 degree high December temperature was matched by Jack Kemp's hot passing hand. Showing before the home fans as a Bill for the first time, the boyish redhead completed 21 of 35 passes for 248 yards and two touchdowns — both one-yarders — to Ernie Warlick and Tom Rychlec. Warlick caught 9, all told, for 117 yards. Cookie Gilchrist kicked a 37-yard field goal and capped a 60-yard drive by plunging from the two, for the insurance score. Two key interceptions in the last period by Willie West kept the game safe.

DECEMBER 8 at NEW YORK Buffalo 20; New York 3

The Bills closed out their first winning season with a 20-3 victory over New York. The fabulous Cookie Gilchrist scored all points — two touchdown runs of 37 and 42; two field goals of 42 and 27 yards — gained 149 yards rushing to establish a new AFL season ground-gaining record of 1096 yards, and generally conducted himself as a one-man gang. Ernie Warlick caught 5 more of Kemp's passes, a total of 14 in two games, while Mike Stratton engineered a pair of interceptions to thwart New York scoring drives. Ex-Bills' quarterback Johnny Green completed 20 of 39 passes for his team, but they weren't enough.
